COMPELLING NEED: A WORLD IN CRISIS

Millions of individuals live on less than five dollars a day. They are often sick, poor, undereducated, and members of vulnerable groups: These people desperately need compassionate, skilled care to survive and thrive.

THE DESIRE TO SERVE

Healthcare professionals and students are eager to serve but often feel unprepared to navigate cross-cultural barriers, address unfamiliar diseases, or work with limited resources. They need more than passion; they need the right training.

THE INMED MISSION

Since 2003, the Institute for International Medicine (INMED) has worked to equip healthcare professionals and students to serve the forgotten. We do this through online and in-person courses, hands-on training, and international service-learning opportunities. INMED proudly works with the full spectrum of healthcare professionals, from medicine, public health, dentistry, nursing, pharmacy, and more.

EQUIPPING LEARNERS, SAVING LIVES

"Having done global medical work for over 30 years this was the first program I ever found that applied to the kind of diseases and situations one finds on the ground.

Previously everything I learned was self taught."

-INMED Graduate

"I completed my INMED Service-Learning at Kiwoko Hospital, Uganda, which has a very busy obstetric ward and NICU. During my time there, I was involved in multiple neonatal resuscitations. In those high adrenaline moments, I realized that a dying infant was lying in front of me, and that the Helping Babies Breathe algorithm (that I learned at INMED) was easy to remember and fall back on. Helping Babies Breathe tailors the application of the information to the limited resource setting. These skills are truly lifesaving. I recommend this course for anyone, regardless of your current level of training."
